[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE RECORD-UNION.]

The Next President.
CHICAGO, June 1st.—Warner Miller arrived from the West yesterday. When asked who were being spoken of for Presidential candidates, he said: "I am too early to make a statement. As I told them in Colorado, I regard three names seriously—Harrison of Indiana, Edmunds and Logan. Harrison is very popular among the people here, and is a candidate. Both Edmunds and Davis were in Colorado when I was there, and there was of course a good deal of talk on the subject; but all felt that it was too soon to prophesy. By the way, Dana, of the Sun, had been there, and I heard it said that he was still for Tilden."

"Then you think the old stalwart fight will not be revived?"
"I don't see how it can. No, it will not come up again. A new man will be taken up, who can unite the factions."

The Senator thought the tariff question might be revived by the Democrats at the next session, but it is hardly probable that it would amount to much, in view of the nearness of the Presidential election and a division among the Democrats on the issue.

CHICAGO, June 1st.—The mail mill in Belleville is running to-day as usual, and the Western will begin as soon as the damage to the mill is repaired. Both mills are working on the same scale as last year, and are not embarrassed by any paucity of business.

A telegram from Jarrett has been received at the mill, stating that the mill is in good condition, and gave great satisfaction.

The nut and bolt mill in East St. Louis is running to-day, but the Superintendent declines to say any further information.

The Prussian Ministry and the Church.
BERLIN, June 1st.—A dispatch from Berlin to the Exchange Telegraph Company says: Prince Bismarck presided yesterday at a meeting of the Prussian Ministry. It was decided to take the regulation of Church matters in their own hands, independent of Rome, and submit a bill in the Diet providing for a modification of the May laws.

CITY OF MEXICO, June 1st.—A Colima paper states that work is suspended on the Mexican National Railroad.

Prosperity of the Suez Canal.
Now that a second Suez Canal is about to be built, the success of the first canal, in a financial point of view, is of interest as a measure explaining the inducement for building another. The returns of the Suez Canal Company to December 31, 1882, show that the past year has been the most prosperous one the canal has seen, the number of vessels making the transit being 3,198 against 2,727 in 1881, the tonnage being 6,811,621 as against 5,704,401, and the receipts being 60,504,578 francs as against 51,274,332 francs. The excess is therefore 471 vessels, 1,017,220 tons and 9,230,226 francs. The business done by the company since its first complete year's working in 1870 appears from the following table:

Vessels.	Tonnage.	Receipts.
1870.....	480	43,611
1871.....	550	49,417
1872.....	600	53,000
1873.....	650	56,000
1874.....	700	59,000
1875.....	750	62,000
1876.....	800	65,000
1877.....	850	68,000
1878.....	900	71,000
1879.....	950	74,000
1880.....	1,000	77,000
1881.....	1,050	80,000
1882.....	1,100	83,000

The dividend of the company in 1881 was 137 per cent, including the 5 per cent interest which each share carries. The increase in the revenue in 1882, namely, about 9 per cent—will probably raise the dividend for that year to something over 20 per cent, for each share of the nominal value of 500 francs.

The exchanges at the San Francisco Clearing-house for the month of May were $47,842,828, against $52,648,444 for the same month last year. The falling off of $4,805,600 is largely due to the diminished volume of the wheat trade.

The Supreme Court has remanded the case of Mary J. McDougall vs. the Central Pacific Railroad Company for a new trial. The case was tried in the San Francisco Superior Court, and a verdict was rendered in favor of the defendant. The action is to recover $25,000 damages for personal injuries sustained by a fall while alighting from one of the defendant's cars in February, 1880, and the ground of the reversal of the judgment is that the Court below erred in instructions given to the jury.

THE WEB OF LIFE.

We stand at the wheel of life and spin,
And we draw the life threads to and fro;
And the dark and the light go blending,
As the daylight comes and the daylight goes.

And our feet grow tired of the weary tread,
And our hands grow tired of the endless toil;
But each human soul must spin its thread,
And wind and color it on the loom of life.

We stand at the loom of life and weave,
The garb that our souls must ever wear,
And look at the faded and the worn,
At the broken ends and the seams of care.

For we cannot see as the days go by,
And the wheel whirles on its daily routine,
That we let the threads run in their course,
And that in the web they will be seen.

But all must stand at the wheel and spin,
And, whether the web is good or ill,
The threads that we must weave must be,
Is woven here at the loom of life.

To spirit guide us with their care,
A wiser than we will be the web;
And under the shuttle of patient prayer,
Will the garment shine as a perfect whole.

OF INTEREST TO LADIES.

Concerning the Well-being and Regulation of the Female System.

Silkworm green is soberly announced as the latest tint in that shade.

Plain jerseys of red or blue are much worn with lawn tennis costumes.

Sleeves of dresses and wraps are worn exceedingly high, and full on the shoulder.

The Chinese driving cloak with abbot sleeves has taken the place this season of the French redingote.

Silk jerseys, gloves in strawberry red, pale yellow, nun's gray, and black will be more in vogue this summer than kid gloves of any sort.

In French importations of costumes the polonaise reappears once and again in varied forms, and with endless styles of drapery and garniture.

Pale yellow and bright gold are the colors triumphant even in floral garlands. The gaudy sunflower has sunk into oblivion, but is replaced by primroses, cowslips, marigolds, kingpins, Narcissus and marshallows.

Burnished gold, mandarin yellow, and the creamy shade of raw silk are the tints in yellow more favored this season than that of old gold or copper-color, so fashionable last year.

Handsome toilets of strawberry-colored ottoman silk are shown, with deep boucées edged with wide cross-way bands of the darkest plum-colored velvet, the flounces being put on with several rows of drooping puffs. The back draping is a blending of the two materials; the sides have panels of the velvet, and the graceful Babet coat opens over an embroidered waistcoat, also of the velvet.

The newest red parasols are trimmed with ficelle lace, the lace being put on each gore fan fashion. Many of the satin parasols have flower-shaped linings, with lace arranged on the outside, to be carried with Watteau costumes. Others are of chine silk or brocade, edged with marabout. There will probably be more novelties presented before the season is over, but the flat, Japanese-shaped umbrella has quite disappeared from good society, and is only carried over the head of the maiden from some sequestered district, who, triumphant in the mitigated glories of a fresh color, a brand-new gown of the latest, light blue, plaid procurable, has come to the city, perhaps intending to take the town by storm.

Mention has more than once been made of the extent to which beads are worn as garniture and ornaments. Large Roman pearls, tinted with pale mauve, light blue, a delicate pink, and green blending with a sheen of silver or gold, are just now more in vogue than the smaller beads, the former not being so easily imitated in cheaper makes, and their price, which is considerable, insuring them against becoming common. The most expensive kinds, though supposed to emanate from the Holy City, really come from France, from whence the best imitations are imported. There is a marked difference in the quality of these representative gems, some being scarcely distinguishable from real pearls, and their price is proportionate.

Polonaises and princesses, pointed boucées, with panther scarfs and jackets draped with plain, bright colors in sateen or satin, profusely trimmed with lace, and worn over skirts of flowered sateen, either trimmed with the same or plain, and edged with a ruche or a fan plaiting of lace, will be very fashionably worn. For less dressy costumes the gay and pretty checked zephyrs in "gingham" effects, and other summer materials, such as Oriental monies, flowered cambrics, linens and fine French cretonnes, will be employed. These are made more simply, while cambric or muslin embroidery being a favorite garniture. Broad ribbon sashes and sashes or corded waist belts often accompanying the bodies of these dresses, which are difficult to fit closely to the form. These are among the latest fashion hints from the Eastern papers.

FEMININE BEVITIES.

The sweetest thing in life is the unclouded welcome of a wife. (Willis.)

Woman physicians have been refused permission to practice in Austria.

For where is any author in the world teaches such beauty as a woman's eye? (Shakespeare.)

"Gracious, wife!" said a father, as he looked at his son William's torn trousers, "get that little Bill reseeded."

The London Young Women's Christian Association now has 5,600 members—an increase of 1,600 within a year.

Some one wants to know why Nilsson announces every concert she gives in Boston as a "farewell." Because she does far well every time.

The three husbands of a Pennsylvania young woman of eighteen years are all dead. Matrimony over there appears to be a little ahead of the cholera.

A French writer says there was once in the environs of Rome a miller's daughter so pretty and so cruel that the signs of her lovers alone served to turn the sails of her father's mill.

The Empress of Austria, in addition to her hunting accomplishments, is a poetess. She has ordered a miniature printing press, and is learning to set type, in order to print her own poems.

Brigham Young's grave is utterly neglected, and his widows never visit it. They went there once to cry over his remains, but it made the ground so muddy they all caught cold. (Philadelphia News.)

When Mrs. Astor, wife of the American Minister, was presented to the Queen of Italy it is said that Her Majesty was so surprised with her beauty that she remained speechless with admiration for several minutes.

"What's the matter, John? You look very much depressed. Has your bank burst?" "No; but my sweetheart and I have had a quarrel and I'm so afraid that she'll make up with me that I don't know what to do."

"Who is this Mrs. Langtry?" asked one Nashville youth of another. "Oh, she's the prettiest woman of New Jersey," replied the other, confidentially. Nashville has ten furo banks, five national banks and three daily papers.

Strange, it is not, that a woman who would scream and run if a beetle or spider were to lodge on her clothing will adorn herself with beetle-sized and life-like imitations of the original, and rather court than shun the notoriety which such false tastes give her?

Cherry blossoms may be made to open in the house by setting the budded twigs in water in which nitrate of soda is dissolved. Five grains to a quart of water makes a solution of the proper strength, and a grain of the salt should be added every day until the blossoms are open.

Table scarfs are still trimmed with bands of plush across the end, but a new and greatly way to ornament them is to insert a square of plush worked with a spray of flowers. This is placed about two-thirds of the length of one of its sides from the end, or if it be set lozenge-wise, about half the same distance.

A correspondent asks what will remove the "shine" from black silk. This can not always be done; it depends on how much worn it is; but sometimes it can be freshened surprisingly by sponging with cold coffee and ammonia—a teaspoonful of ammonia to nearly a cupful of coffee. Use a very soft sponge or a flannel cloth; rub very gently; and, if possible to get along without so doing, do not iron the silk at all. Spread it out smoothly while damp, and pin the edges to an ironing-table or board, and let it dry in this way. If it is too much wrinkled or folded, lay a cloth over the wrong side of the silk after sponging, and iron.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Food husbands who find would have home be as Eden.

For you and your eyes all complete as a whole, To read in, to write in, to sleep in, to feed in, Forget not the closets so dear to the soul. But hold them in corners, in nooks and in crannies. Wherever a closet may harbor or hide, And give to your Mary, your Kate and your Annie.

The big, airy closets, their joy and their pride—The roomy, clean, closets, the well-oiled cinders, The big, airy closets, their joy and their pride.

I always think the flowers can see us and know what we are thinking about.—(George Eliot.)

Parquet floors should never be washed with soap and water, but should be cleaned with turpentine about once a month.

Cold ham, either fried or boiled, is very good mixed with macaroni. Boil the ham until tender, warm dice of the former in a saucepan and mix them with the macaroni, adding a little melted butter and milk to moisten it.

A lady offers in the Rural New Yorker a remedy for crabs and rose worms: Take one pound of quassia, put in twelve or fifteen gallons of water over night, and next day sprinkle the infested plants with the solution. It is safest, however, to pin one's faith to white hellebore, which is a sure and certain destruction.

Soft ginger-bread, if eaten while fresh and warm, may well take the place of more expensive cake. One egg, one cup of molasses, one-third of a cup of melted butter, one-half cup of sweet milk, one teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of ginger, two and one-half cups of flour, and a little salt; dissolve the soda in a very little hot water. Bake in a buttered tin.

To make an excellent soup, allow four pounds of beef to stew in a half quart of water, one small onion, one carrot and a small head of celery. Three-quarters of an hour before dinner strain this soup, salt it, and add a heaping teaspoonful of macaroni broken in bits; let this boil slowly. Add any other seasoning you like; for some tastes a pinch of curry powder improves it.

The bread crumb comprises a multitude of cells of thin walls containing carbonic acid gas, the product of fermentation in the dough. These walls of the cells contain both gluten and starch, and traces of dextrine and sugar. As a consequence of the treatment with water and the application of heat, the starch grains, which, in their normal condition, are little sacs filled with minute granules of starch proper, have been swollen and burst.

To make orange fritters, stir half a pound of flour to half an ounce of butter; add the yolks of two eggs and milk enough to make a batter that will drop from a spoon. Beat thoroughly and add half a salt spoonful of salt and the whites of two eggs. Peel and cut oranges in thin round slices, using a very sharp knife. Dip the slices in sugar and then in the batter. Pineapple fritters may be made in the same way, cutting the slices of pineapple into triangular pieces and soaking them in wine if you wish.

SPOTS UPON JUPITER.

Late in the summer of 1878, says a writer in the Cleveland Herald, something happened on the planet Jupiter which immediately excited the attention of astronomers. It was the discovery of a new and quite unexpected phenomenon. South of the southern equatorial belt of the planet an oblong red spot suddenly made its appearance. It was so large and its color was so prominent that even the smallest telescopes readily and clearly showed it. Jupiter is a world in comparison with which this earth is insignificant. In order to circumnavigate Jupiter a sea captain would have to sail as far as from the earth to the moon and then go on a distance greater than the circumference of the earth in addition. If New York and San Francisco were set down on the surface of Jupiter at the same time, it would take them more than 30,000 miles to get to the other side of the planet. It is no wonder then that the astronomers felt a little excited when they saw a huge red spot suddenly appear on the face of Jupiter, as if a pugilist combatant had hit the giant planet a blow from the shoulder and drawn blood. The red spot was some 30,000 miles long and 6,000 miles broad—big enough to encircle the earth like a grand marauder's sash, with 5,000 miles to spare. Yet on Jupiter this huge spot resembled a small red blotch on an apple. Every body who looked at it with a telescope felt an irresistible desire to know what it was. Some guessed it was one of the red-hot continents of the yet burning planet thrust up through the superincumbent vapors by some internal convulsion, such as lifted up great masses of the earth's crust in its early geological days. Others surmised that it might be an opening rent through the cloudy envelope of the planet and showing its glowing surface beneath. Some thought it was a great cloud, and some that it was a fiery spot cast up from the planetary surface beneath. It was soon discovered that it had a motion of its own—at least that it performed its revolution around the planet in a period shorter from that of some light spots on the equator. This only served to intensify the curiosity of beholders. Unexpectedly last fall the great spot began to fade. A veil seemed to have been drawn over it, and all its outlines grew faint. Like a fiery meteor, which had only come to the surface to breathe, it seemed to be sinking back again into the depths of Jupiter's cloud ocean. The latest news regarding this phenomenon is that it has practically ceased to be visible. The astronomical monthlies have stopped printing tables giving the time of its meridian passage, and only the most gigantic telescopes are capable of detecting the slight glimpses of the disappearing monster. But while one wonder is going off the stage another comes on. Of late the general appearance of Jupiter's surface has greatly changed. Some power appears to be at work changing not only the forms but the colors of the planet's belts and spots, and Jupiter is now exhibiting universal admiration by the brilliant appearance of his broad chest, streaked and mottled with delicate tints of pink, red, sepia and steel blue. What is happening on the great planet nobody knows, but it looks as though it would be a very quiet place of abode for any but a race of salamanders.
